

JASON

Host, The REI Foundation Podcast with Jason and Pili

Westfield, NJ

Jason is a real estate entrepreneur, mentor and podcaster. Jason lives in New Jersey with his beautiful wife Pili and have three lovely children Luke, Lily and Leo. He has started a number of successful businesses including restaurants, a brewery and rehab company.

Jason is the Host of the Real Estate Investing Foundation podcast. A platform serving to help Real Estate Investors take massive action through learning from the steps and missteps many industry pros have taken along the way.

While not podcasting Yarusi Holdings, a home solutions company, flips homes and operates beach side AirBNBs locally in New Jersey while the multifamily division, Oak Capital Partners, focuses on large multifamily assets in the midwest and Southeast currently hovering at 150 doors.

Beyond real estate Jason's family business has lifted and moved buildings for over 40 years and have been a major factor in helping to restore the Jersey Shore after Hurricane Sandy. To date W.A. Building Movers has lifted and remediated over 1600 homes since the storm making them FEMA compliant. You can see them moving a house on Dirty Jobs with Mike Rowe.

Jason strives on continually working to improve himself and to help others around him. Pili and Jason seek to help other couples achieve financial freedom through real estate and help them to create the ability to live their life, their way. Jason enjoys running and crossfit and loves to wrestle with his two English Bulldogs Jack and Jill whom happen to be the image and name for a New York City microbrewery and restaurant.

Finally, our focus is to raise communities to new heights across multiple platforms. If we all focus on making ourselves better first we are certain what we project with resonate with those around us.
